

Heisman Fever 2005

A look at what's shaping up to be a close battle for the Heisman Trophy race

Whereas last year was one of the most unpredictable Heisman Trophy races of all time, especially during the first half of the season, this year there are three athletes who are winning over the voters: Matt Leinart and Reggie Bush from USC and Vince Young from Texas. A case could be made for all of them.

Matt Leinart won the Heisman last year, Reggie Bush is one of the most athletic and versatile college football players of all time, and Vince Young does everything well on a team that appears to be the most serious challenge to USC's national title defense. And their competition will not end with the award presentation, as all three will be serious contenders to be the number-one pick in the NFL draft.

The following pictorial essay contains our selections as the leading candidates to win the Heisman this year. Who is your choice?
