The BFS Coaches Who Help Coaches

A look at the BFS clinicians who are showing coaches and athletes how to train smart hen Dr. Greg Shepard founded BFS in 1976, being the only employee he was obviously the only clinician. But that situation changed quickly. In 1983 the company incorporated, and by then the number of clinicians had increased to a dozen. Now, with BFS presenting more than 400 seminars a year, BFS has 30 active clinicians, with another dozen in training.

With few exceptions, such as teachers who have recently retired, BFS clinicians are high school coaches, many with master's degrees, and certified teachers. Becoming a BFS clinician is not an easy task; it requires not just extensive academic and coaching experience but also up to a two-year mentoring program. Few coaching seminar programs demand so much from their representatives, but the result is that we have assembled a group of clinicians who are second to none.

Because most of our clinicians are active coaches, we often carry articles about their success in BFS magazine. This issue, for example, we are running a feature on Jeff Scurran, who took over a struggling football program at Santa Rita High School and won three playoff games. And next issue we'll carry an article about Ray Cosenza's success in the playoffs.

At BFS, we believe all our clinicians are special, so we are devoting the next few pages to introduce you to our current clinician staff. Hopefully, you will soon be able to see one of them in action at your school.

ALABAMA

Lance Neven, Southeast Director

Montgomery, AL

When he was 22 years old, Coach Neven was the youngest high school head coach in Alabama. He was on the Auburn High School strength and conditioning staff for 1988-89, and the following year he was a strength coach at UMS-Wright. He has been coaching the BFS program since 1986. "Our motto in the Southeast is 'Leave it ALL on the field," says Neven. "And at BFS we are going to give it everything we've got, each and every day, to help communities, schools, coaches and especially the athletes to win."

ARIZONA

Jeff Scurran, Clinician/Sales Rep

Tucson, AZ

Coach Scurran has turned around six losing programs and put them into playoffs within his second year. He coached Tucson's Sabino High School, in Tucson, Arizona, to the 1990, 1992 and 1998 Arizona State Championship; all three teams were nationally ranked. He also coached Pima College to a #5 national ranking and a major bowl upset win. In 2007 he took over a 0-10 Santa Rita High School and went 11-2 and a trip to the state semi-finals.

Bentonville, AR
